

Hey there, Southview friends and family!

We've been thinking a lot lately, and we've noticed something that we wanted to chat with you about openly and honestly. Over the past couple of years, it feels like our wonderful community has become a little quieter, with fewer folks joining in on the activities we've been trying to put together.

We totally get it – life is a whirlwind! Between work, family, and everything else that fills our days, finding extra time can feel impossible. We really do understand that.

But as our kids continue to grow, something important has become clear. The amazing people who have been so dedicated to our council and supporting our school are seeing their own children move on. And honestly, the things we dream of doing for our kids – the fun events, the extra support for their learning – they become harder and harder to achieve when we don't have more hands on deck.

Think about it: these activities enrich our children's lives, create those special school memories, and build a stronger, more connected community for all of us. But to keep these things going, to make them even better, we truly need your energy and your voice.

Even a little bit of your time and involvement can make a huge difference. Whether it's helping out at events, volunteering for our hot lunch program, sharing your ideas, or even just spreading the good word, every contribution counts.

Let's work together to make sure our kids have the best possible school experience and that our community continues to thrive. What do you say? Are you in to help us keep the spirit alive? We'd absolutely love to have you!
